A developer has been given the go-ahead to build a number of large-scale apartment blocks in York. The decision was taken at a meeting of the city's planning committee on Tuesday evening (March 6). The 39-storey At-on site in the city centre was granted permission by committee members to build 14 storeys in total. But it was met with opposition from some local residents, as well as a petition claiming the development would create illegal levels of overshadowing. Planning officers recommended the project be approved, with conditions to include a mixed-use corner block to create a "transition area" between the city centre and At-on's large development on York High Street. Grant of consent granted at Mayor of York Councillor Gary Smith's final planning meeting of the year.
